

1
2 3
4
5 6
7
8
9 10 11 12 13 14
15
16 17
18 19 20 21
22
23
24
25
26
27 28

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA
SAN JOSE DIVISION

COUNTY OF SANTA CRUZ, CALIFORNIA;
CITY OF SANTA CRUZ, CALIFORNIA;
VALERIE CORRAL; ELADIO V. ACOSTA;
JAMES DANIEL BAEHR; MICHAEL
CHESLOSKY; JENNIFER LEE HENTZ;
DOROTHY GIBBS; HAROLD F. MARGOLIN; and WO/MEN’S ALLIANCE FOR MEDICAL MARIJUANA,

Plaintiffs,

v.

JOHN ASHCROFT, Attorney General of the United States; WILLIAM B. SIMPKINS, Acting
Administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration;
JOHN P. WALTERS, Director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy; and 30 UNKNOWN
DRUG ENFORCEMENT ADMINISTRATION
AGENTS,

Defendants.

Case Number C-03-1802 JF

ORDER DENYING PLAINTIFFS’
MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION AND GRANTING DEFENDANTS’ MOTION TO DISMISS WITH LEAVE TO AMEND

[Docket Nos. 3, 40]

Plaintiffs seek a preliminary injunction enjoining Defendants from conducting further raids or seizures against Plaintiff Wo/Men’s Alliance for Medical Marijuana (“WAMM”) and its member-patients, and from conducting raids or seizures against patients using marijuana for medicinal purposes

1 in compliance with California’s medicinal marijuana statute within the City and County of Santa Cruz.
2 Defendants move to dismiss Plaintiffs’ complaint. Both motions are opposed. The Court has read and 3 considered the briefing and evidence submitted by the parties and has considered the arguments of 4 counsel presented at the hearing on July 7, 2003. For the reasons set forth below, Plaintiffs’ motion for 5 preliminary injunction will be denied and Defendants’ motion to dismiss will be granted with leave to 6 amend.

7 8 I. BACKGROUND

9 Plaintiff WAMM is a collective hospice organization located in Davenport, California that 10 maintains an office in Santa Cruz, California. See Declaration of Valerie Corral (“Corral Decl.”) ¶ 10.
11 It has approximately 250 member-patients who suffer from HIV or AIDS, multiple sclerosis, glaucoma, 12 epilepsy, various forms of cancer, and other serious illnesses. See id. The vast majority of WAMM
13 members are terminally ill. See id. WAMM assists seriously ill and dying patients by providing them 14 with the opportunity to cultivate marijuana plants for their personal medicinal use and to produce 15 marijuana medications collectively used by WAMM members to alleviate their pain and suffering. See 16 id. ¶¶ 13, 18. Both the cultivation and use of marijuana by WAMM members are carried out only on 17 the recommendation of the patients’ respective physicians in compliance with California’s medicinal 18 marijuana statute. See id. ¶¶ 11, 13. Members of WAMM assist in cultivating marijuana plants to the 19 extent of their physical abilities; they do not purchase, sell, or otherwise distribute marijuana. See id. ¶¶ 20 11, 13, 20. WAMM also provides community support to seriously ill and dying patients through 21 weekly meetings and other forms of outreach. See id. ¶ 12. WAMM is supported by voluntary 22 contributions, and its members are not charged for their use of marijuana. See id. ¶ 20.

23 Plaintiff Valerie Corral, the executive director of WAMM, and her husband Michael Corral, 24 her primary caregiver, founded the organization in 1993. See id. ¶ 10. The Corrals reside on a farm in 25 Davenport, California, where they permit members of WAMM to cultivate marijuana plants for 26 medicinal use. See id. Valerie Corral and Plaintiffs Eladio V. Acosta, James Daniel Baehr, Michael 27 Cheslosky, Jennifer Lee Hentz, Dorothy Gibbs, and Harold F. Margolin (collectively “the Patient-

1 Plaintiffs”) use medicinal marijuana on the recommendation of their respective physicians to alleviate 2 pain and suffering caused by their illnesses and to treat certain other symptoms.

3 The Controlled Substances Act, 21 U.S.C. §§ 801, et seq. (“CSA”), provides that “[e]xcept 4 as authorized by this subchapter, it shall be unlawful for any person knowingly or intentionally . . . to 5 manufacture, distribute, or dispense, or possess with intent to manufacture, distribute, or dispense, a 6 controlled substance.” 21 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1).¹ The CSA divides drugs and certain other substances

7
8 ¹ The CSA includes extensive and specific Congressional declarations and findings, including 9 declarations as to the effect of intrastate activities involving controlled substances on interstate 10 commerce:

- 11 (1) Many of the drugs included within this subchapter have a useful and legitimate 12 medical purpose and are necessary to maintain the health and general welfare of the 13 American people.
14 (2) The illegal importation, manufacture, distribution, and possession and improper use 15 of controlled substances have a substantial and detrimental effect on the health and 16 general welfare of the American people.
17 (3) A major portion of the traffic in controlled substances flows through interstate and 18 foreign commerce. Incidents of the traffic which are not an integral part of the interstate 19 or foreign flow, such as manufacture, local distribution, and possession, nonetheless have 20 a substantial and direct effect upon interstate commerce because—21 (A) after manufacture, many controlled substances are transported in 22 interstate commerce,
23 (B) controlled substances distributed locally usually have been transported 24 in interstate commerce immediately before their distribution, and 25 (C) controlled substances possessed commonly flow through interstate 26 commerce immediately prior to such possession.
27 (4) Local distribution and possession of controlled substances contribute to swelling the 28 interstate traffic in such substances.
(5) Controlled substances manufactured and distributed intrastate cannot be differentiated from controlled substances manufactured and distributed interstate. Thus, it is not feasible to distinguish, in terms of controls, between controlled substances manufactured and distributed interstate and controlled substances manufactured and distributed intrastate.
(6) Federal control of the intrastate incidents of the traffic in controlled substances is essential to the effective control of the interstate incidents of such traffic.
(7) The United States is a party to the Single Convention on Narcotic Drugs, 1961, and other international conventions designed to establish effective control over international

1 into five categories, or schedules, that impose varying restrictions on access to a drug according to the 2 schedule in which the drug has been placed. See 21 U.S.C. § 812(a). A drug is assigned to Schedule
3 I, the most restrictive schedule, if (1) it “has a high potential for abuse,” (2) it “has no currently accepted 4 medical use in treatment in the United States,” and (3) “[t]here is a lack of accepted safety for use of 5 the drug . . . under medical supervision.” 21 U.S.C. § 812(b)(1). Marijuana is assigned by statute to 6 Schedule I. See 21 U.S.C. § 812(c).² “Schedule I drugs may be obtained and used lawfully only by 7 doctors who submit a detailed research protocol for approval by the Food and Drug Administration 8 and who agree to abide by strict recordkeeping and storage rules.” Alliance for Cannabis 9 Therapeutics v. Drug Enforcement Admin., 15 F.3d 1131, 1133 (D.C. Cir. 1994).

10 California’s medicinal marijuana statute, the Compassionate Use Act of 1996, was enacted by 11 California voters on November 5, 1996, when they passed Proposition 215. See Cal. Health & Safety 12 Code § 11362.5. The statute creates an exemption from state laws that prohibit the cultivation and use 13 of marijuana by permitting patients and their primary caregivers to possess and cultivate marijuana for 14 personal medicinal use upon a physician’s recommendation or approval. Id. § 11362.5(d). There is 15 no dispute that the activities of WAMM and the Patient-Plaintiffs, each of whose primary caregiver also 16 is a WAMM member, are legal under the statute.

17 Prior to passage of Proposition 215, Plaintiff County of Santa Cruz (“the County”) had adopted 18 an ordinance directing County officials to use their authority to support the availability of marijuana for 19 medicinal use. See Santa Cruz County Code Ch. 7.122.020 - 7.1222.060. Following enactment of 20 the Compassionate Use Act of 1996 by California voters, Plaintiff City of Santa Cruz (“the City”)

21 _____
22 and domestic traffic in controlled substances.

23 21 U.S.C. § 801(1)-(7).
24

25 ² The criteria for Schedule II are: (1) the drug “has a high potential for abuse,” (2) it “has a 26 currently accepted medical use in treatment in the United States or a currently accepted medical use 27 with severe restrictions,” and (3) “[a]buse of the drug . . . may lead to severe psychological or physical 28 dependence.” 21 U.S.C. § 812(b)(2). Drugs assigned to Schedule II include codeine, coca leaves, morphine, methadone, and methamphetamine. See 21 C.F.R. § 1308.12.

1 enacted additional legislation to facilitate implementation of the statute. See Santa Cruz Municipal Code 2 Ch. 6.90.010, et seq. Among other things, the City’s medicinal marijuana ordinance authorizes the 3 City to deputize individuals and organizations as medicinal marijuana providers to assist the City in 4 implementing the statute. Id. Ch. 6.90.040(1).

5 On September 5, 2002, between twenty and thirty armed agents led by officers of the federal 6 Drug Enforcement Administration (“DEA”) arrived at the Corrals’ property to execute a search 7 warrant. See Corral Decl. ¶ 27. The DEA agents forcibly entered the premises, pointed loaded 8 firearms at the Corrals, forced them to the ground, and handcuffed them. See id. The Corrals 9 subsequently were transported to the federal courthouse in San Jose, where they were released without 10 being charged. See id. ¶ 27, 28. DEA agents remained on the premises for eight hours, seizing 167 11 marijuana plants, many of the WAMM members’ weekly allotments of medicinal marijuana, various 12 documents and records, and other items. See id. ¶ 28.

13 Less than two weeks after the DEA’s September 5, 2002 raid, the County’s Board of 14 Supervisors adopted a resolution condemning the raid and urging the federal government not to indict 15 the Corrals for their activities. See Ex. B to Declaration of Ellen Pirie (“Pirie Decl.”). On September 16 17, 2002, the City permitted WAMM members to receive their weekly allotments of medicinal 17 marijuana at the Santa Cruz City Hall. See Corral Decl. ¶ 33; Declaration of Emily Reilly (“Reilly 18 Decl.”) ¶ 5. The City Council subsequently adopted a resolution deputizing WAMM and the Corrals
19 to function as City-authorized medicinal marijuana providers pursuant to the City’s medicinal marijuana 20 ordinance. See Ex. A to Reilly Decl.

21 On September 24, 2002, WAMM and the Corrals filed a related action against the federal 22 government in this Court seeking return of the marijuana plants and other property seized in the 23 September 5, 2002 raid pursuant to Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 41(e). See Wo/Men’s 24 Alliance for Medical Marijuana, et al. v. United States, No. 02-MC-7012 JF (N.D. Cal. filed 25 Sept. 24, 2002).³ The movants argued that their conduct did not affect interstate commerce and that 27 ³ The City and County are not parties to the related action.

1 application of the CSA to such conduct thus constituted an unlawful exercise of Congressional powers
2 under the Commerce Clause. This Court concluded, however, that disposition of the movants' motion
3 was controlled by Ninth Circuit precedent that precluded the relief sought. Accordingly, the Court 4 denied the motion for return of property by order issued December 3, 2002. See Wo/Men's Alliance
5 for Med. Marijuana v. United States, No. 02-MC-7012 JF, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26389 (N.D.
6 Cal. Dec. 3, 2002). That decision has been appealed to the United States Court of Appeals for the 7 Ninth Circuit, and the appeal is scheduled for oral argument in mid-September 2003.

8 On April 23, 2003, Plaintiffs filed the instant action against Defendants John Ashcroft, Attorney 9 General of the United States; John B. Brown III, Acting Administrator of the DEA⁴; John P. Walters, 10 Director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy; and 30 Unknown DEA Agents, seeking to 11 enjoin alleged violations of their constitutional rights. They assert the following claims: (1) deprivation of 12 fundamental rights under the Fifth and Ninth Amendments to alleviate pain and suffering and to control 13 the circumstances of one's own death; (2) deprivation of the fundamental right to follow the 14 recommendations of one's physician; (3) unlawful exercise of Congressional powers under the 15 Commerce Clause; and (4) violation of the Tenth Amendment. Plaintiffs also seek a declaration that 16 WAMM and Valerie Corral are immune from civil and criminal liability under the Controlled 17 Substances Act for their activities, as well as damages for Defendants' alleged violations of their 18 constitutional rights.

19 20 II. LEGAL STANDARD

21 A. Motion for Preliminary Injunction

22 The primary purpose of a preliminary injunction is to preserve the status quo pending a trial on 23 the merits. Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum Comm'n v. National Football League, 634 F.2d 24 1197, 1200 (9th Cir. 1980). A party seeking a preliminary injunction must show either (1) a

25
26 ⁴ Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 25(d)(1), William B. Simpkins, Acting 27 Administrator of the DEA, was automatically substituted as a party for his predecessor, John B. Brown 28 III.

1 combination of probable success on the merits and the possibility of irreparable injury, or (2) the 2 existence of serious questions going to the merits and that the balance of hardships tips in its favor. Roe
3 v. Anderson, 134 F.3d 1400, 1401-02 (9th Cir. 1998), aff'd, Saenz v. Roe, 526 U.S. 489 (1999).
4 These formulations represent “two points on a sliding scale in which the required degree of irreparable 5 harm increases as the probability of success decreases.” United States v. Odessa Union Warehouse
6 Co-op, 833 F.2d 172, 174 (9th Cir. 1987). However, ““even if the balance of hardships tips 7 decidedly in favor of the moving party, it must be shown as an irreducible minimum that there is a fair 8 chance of success on the merits.”” Johnson v. California State Bd. of Accountancy, 72 F.3d 1427, 9 1430 (9th Cir. 1995) (citing Martin v. Int’l Olympic Comm., 740 F.2d 670, 675 (9th Cir. 1984)).
10 Depending on the nature of the case, the court also may consider whether the public interest will be 11 advanced by granting the requested relief. Id.; Westlands Water Dist. v. Natural Resources Defense 12 Council, 43 F.3d 457, 459 (9th Cir. 1994).

14 B. Motion to Dismiss

15 A complaint may be dismissed only if it is certain that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts 16 entitling him or her to relief. Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45-6 (1957). When a court considers a 17 motion to dismiss, all factual allegations in the complaint are taken as true and construed in the light 18 most favorable to the nonmoving party. Parks School of Business, Inc. v. Symington, 51 F.3d 1480, 19 1484 (9th Cir. 1995). “However, the court is not required to accept legal conclusions cast in the form 20 of factual allegations if those conclusions cannot reasonably be drawn from the facts alleged.” Clegg v.
21 Cult Awareness Network, 18 F.3d 752, 754-755 (9th Cir. 1994). A court’s review is limited to the 22 face of the complaint, documents referenced by the complaint the authenticity of which is not contested, 23 and matters of which the court may take judicial notice. Levine v. Diamantheset, Inc., 950 F.2d 24 1478, 1483 (9th Cir. 1991); In re Stac Elecs. Sec. Litig., 89 F.3d 1399, 1405 n.4 (9th Cir. 1996), 25 cert. denied, Anderson v. Clow, 520 U.S. 1103 (1997).

26 When the court grants a motion to dismiss, “leave to amend should be granted unless the district 27 court ‘determines that the pleading could not possibly be cured by the allegation of other facts.’”

1 United States v. SmithKline Beecham, Inc., 245 F.3d 1048, 1052 (9th Cir. 2001) (citing Lopez v.
2 Smith, 203 F.3d 1122, 1127 (9th Cir. 2000)).

3 4 III. DISCUSSION

5 A. Motion for Preliminary Injunction

6 1. Irreparable Injury

7 Under any formulation of the test for obtaining a preliminary injunction, the moving party must 8 demonstrate that there is a significant threat of irreparable injury. Oakland Tribune, Inc. v. Chronicle 9 Pub. Co., Inc., 762 F.2d 1374, 1376 (9th Cir. 1985). Accordingly, the Court first will assess whether 10 Plaintiffs are likely to suffer irreparable injury if they are denied the requested relief.

11 Plaintiffs assert that Defendants' actions have caused them, and will continue to cause them, 12 irreparable harm. The Patient-Plaintiffs maintain that they already have suffered severe damage to their 13 health as a result of the DEA's September 5, 2002 raid and seizure of their marijuana plants. This 14 Court determined in the related action that WAMM and Valerie Corral had made a sufficient showing 15 that they would suffer irreparable injury if the seized marijuana plants were not returned. See 16 Wo/Men's Alliance for Med. Marijuana, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26389 at *6. The Patient-Plaintiffs 17 have submitted declarations in the present case that establish clearly the harm they have suffered and 18 continue to suffer because of Defendants' actions and because they are denied access to medicinal 19 marijuana. See Corral Decl. ¶¶ 29, 34; Declaration of Eladio V. Acosta ¶¶ 15-18; Declaration of 20 James Daniel Baehr ¶¶ 14, 20-21; Declaration of Michael Cheslosky ¶¶ 18-21; Declaration of Jennifer 21 Lee Hentz ¶¶ 20-25, 28; Declaration of Dorothy Gibbs ¶¶ 19, 21, 23; Declaration of Harold F.
22 Margolin ¶¶ 20-22. Valerie Corral asserts in her declaration that the deaths of at least three WAMM 23 members during the past nine months were hastened significantly by and were made more agonizing 24 because of Defendants' actions. See Corral Decl. ¶¶ 30-32. In addition, the City and County claim 25 that they will suffer continued harm as a result of the federal government's alleged interference with their 26 ability to provide for the health and welfare of their citizens. See Pirie Decl. ¶ 5; Reilly Decl. ¶ 11.

27 Despite the substantial evidence of irreparable harm submitted by Plaintiffs, Defendants 28

1 maintain that Plaintiffs cannot establish a legally cognizable injury in light of United States v. Oakland
2 Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative, 532 U.S. 483 (2001), in which the Supreme Court rejected the 3 patient-defendants' medical necessity defense that was based on an alleged need for medicinal 4 marijuana. Id. at 493-95. None of the Plaintiffs in the instant action, however, has been charged with 5 any crime in connection with the activities at issue, and thus the unavailability of a medical necessity 6 defense in prosecutions for use or possession of medicinal marijuana under the CSA does not 7 necessarily preclude this Court from finding that Plaintiffs have suffered irreparable harm.

8 Defendants also contend that consideration of the public interest militates against granting the 9 requested relief because of the presumed constitutionality of federal statutes and regulations that control 10 the use and possession of marijuana and that establish procedures for reclassification and decontrol of 11 controlled substances. The voters of California, however, through their enactment of the 12 Compassionate Use Act of 1996, and the City and County through their respective medicinal marijuana 13 ordinances, also have articulated strong public interest considerations.

14 There is a robust and ongoing debate as to whether the public interest in fact is served by the 15 DEA's use of its limited resources to target for raids and potential prosecution seriously ill and dying 16 patients such as the Patient-Plaintiffs, who use and possess marijuana only for medicinal purposes. See, 17 e.g., Conant v. Walters, 309 F.3d 629 (9th Cir. 2002) (concurring opinion of Kozinski, J., and 18 authorities cited therein). The federal government itself has distributed medicinal marijuana to seriously 19 ill individuals around the country since 1978 as part of its Investigative New Drug Program. Id. at 648.
20 Patients who participate in the program receive monthly allotments of marijuana grown at a federal 21 marijuana research facility. Plaintiffs assert that although the program, which they claim included 22 approximately eighty patients at its peak, was closed to new patients in 1992, six patients continue to 23 this day to receive monthly allotments of medicinal marijuana. Arguably, the continued distribution of 24 medicinal marijuana as part of the federal government's own Investigative New Drug Program suggests 25 that there is at least some legitimate public interest in permitting certain seriously ill or terminally ill 26 patients to use marijuana for medicinal purposes.

27 Based on the record before it, the Court will proceed on the assumption that the Patient-

1 Plaintiffs adequately have demonstrated that they face a significant threat of irreparable harm because of 2 Defendants' actions.

3
4 2. Likelihood of Success on the Merits

5 Plaintiffs make several arguments in support of their contention that they are likely to succeed 6 on the merits of their claims; the Court will address these arguments in turn. Plaintiffs also request that 7 this Court recognize explicitly for the first time a constitutionally protected right to use physician-8 recommended medication to alleviate pain and suffering and to control the circumstances of one's own 9 death.

10
11 a. Fundamental Rights to Maintain Bodily Integrity, Alleviate Pain and Suffering, 12 and Control the Circumstances of One's Own Death

13 Plaintiffs first claim that Defendants' enforcement of the CSA under the circumstances of this 14 case violates their fundamental rights under the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment and under 15 the Ninth Amendment. The Patient-Plaintiffs assert that the rights to maintain bodily integrity, alleviate 16 pain and suffering, and control the circumstances of one's own death, though unenumerated in the Bill 17 of Rights, are deeply rooted in our nation's history. They contend that Defendants' interference with 18 the Compassionate Use Act of 1996 impermissibly infringes on these fundamental rights, which the 19 Patient-Plaintiffs exercise by cultivating and using marijuana for medicinal purposes. When the 20 government impairs the exercise of a fundamental right, courts apply a strict scrutiny standard under 21 which the government must demonstrate a compelling interest for its actions, not merely a rational 22 relationship between the statute at issue and permissible state objectives. See Shapiro v. Thompson, 23 394 U.S. 618, 627-35 (1969). The Patient-Plaintiffs argue that the government's actions fail to survive 24 the strict level of scrutiny that applies to violations of cognizable fundamental rights.⁵

25 _____
26 ⁵ The fact that California law does not prohibit the use of marijuana for medicinal purposes 27 under certain circumstances is not determinative of whether the Patient-Plaintiffs have a fundamental 28 right to use it. See United States v. Cannabis Cultivator's Club, No. C-98-00085 CRB, etc., 1999

1 Plaintiffs rely in part upon Cruzan v. Director, Missouri Dep't of Health, 497 U.S. 261, 281
2 (1990), and other Supreme Court decisions that have recognized a fundamental right to maintain bodily 3 integrity. The analysis in Cruzan, in which the Supreme Court presumed the existence of a 4 constitutionally protected liberty interest in refusing unwanted medical treatment, was based on a long 5 line of earlier cases recognizing such a right. The fundamental right to maintain bodily integrity protects 6 against unjustified invasions of one's body by the state. Nowhere in this line of cases, however, is there 7 explicit or even implicit support for the proposition that there is a constitutionally protected right to 8 alleviate one's pain and suffering or control the circumstances of one's own death by using a controlled 9 substance.

10 The Supreme Court's decision in Washington v. Glucksberg, 521 U.S. 702 (1997), provides 11 a stronger basis for Plaintiffs' fundamental rights argument. In Glucksberg, the Supreme Court ruled 12 that a mentally competent, terminally ill adult does not have a fundamental right to commit physician-13 assisted suicide. The court held that only fundamental rights or interests that are "deeply rooted in this 14 Nation's history and tradition" are constitutionally protected under the substantive due process doctrine 15 and thus qualify for anything other than rational basis review, and that such rights must be "carefully 16 described."⁶ Id. at 721. Plaintiffs assert, however, that dicta in four concurring opinions in Glucksberg
17 support their claim that the Patient-Plaintiffs have a fundamental right to use physician-recommended 18 medication to alleviate their pain and suffering and to control the circumstances of their own deaths.

19 In her concurring opinion, in which Justice Ginsburg joined, Justice O'Connor found "no need 20 to address the question whether suffering patients have a constitutionally cognizable interest in obtaining 21 relief from the suffering that they may experience in the last days of their lives." Id. at 737. This 22 statement in particular suggests that these two justices have not foreclosed the possibility of recognizing 23 a fundamental right of a terminally ill person to alleviate his or her pain and suffering. Justice Stevens

24 _____
25 WL 111893, *2 (N.D. Cal. Feb. 25, 1999).

26 ⁶ Plaintiffs note that use of marijuana for medicinal purposes has been in conflict with federal 27 law only for the last thirty-three years of the 227 years since the signing of the Declaration of 28 Independence, and that multiple states have endorsed medicinal use of marijuana.

1 stated in his concurrence that the liberty interest in refusing unwanted medical treatment recognized in 2 Cruzan embraces the individual’s “interest in dignity, and in determining the character of the memories
3 that will survive long after death.” Id. at 743. Justice Stevens further concluded that “[a]voiding 4 intolerable pain and the indignity of living one’s final days incapacitated and in agony” is a fundamental 5 right. Id. at 745. Justice Souter recognized that a person’s “liberty interest in bodily integrity [includes] 6 a right to determine what shall be done with his own body in relation to his medical needs.” Id. at 777.
7 And Justice Breyer stated in his concurrence that any fundamental right to die with dignity includes a 8 right to “the avoidance of unnecessary and severe physical suffering.” Id. at 790.

9 Arguably, the four concurring opinions in Glucksberg, which represent the views of five 10 Supreme Court justices, demonstrate that a majority of the current Supreme Court has not foreclosed 11 the possibility of recognizing a fundamental right of a terminally person to use physician-recommended 12 medication to alleviate his or her pain and suffering and to control the circumstances of his or her own 13 death. Plaintiffs, however, ask this Court not only to recognize such a right but also to find the right 14 applicable to terminally ill persons who desire to use and cultivate a controlled substance. None of the 15 concurring opinions in Glucksberg can be read so expansively. Nor can the application of the right 16 Plaintiffs seek logically be limited to the use of medicinal marijuana; as framed, it would permit a 17 terminally ill person to use and cultivate any substance⁷, regardless of whether Congress or the DEA 18 has determined that it has any medically-established or scientifically-supported benefit, as long as he or 19 she could find a physician to recommend that he or she do so. Such a broadly-defined right is not 20 supported by “our Nation’s history, legal traditions, and practices.” Id. at 710.

21 Even assuming without deciding that there may be a more limited fundamental right or interest of 22 terminally ill persons to alleviate their pain and suffering or to control the circumstances of their deaths
23 by using a physician-recommended medication that has some medically-established benefit, Congress 24

25
26 ⁷ By extension, the fundamental right that Plaintiffs urge this Court to recognize would include 27 the right to use other controlled substances that alleviate pain and suffering such as heroin and 28 morphine.

1 and the DEA have determined that marijuana is not such a medication.⁸ The Court acknowledges that 2 the current assignment of marijuana to Schedule I of the CSA is a matter about which reasonable
3 people may differ. See Conant, 309 F.3d at 640-42 (Kozinski, J., concurring) (“A surprising number 4 of health care professionals and organizations have concluded that the use of marijuana may be 5 appropriate for a small class of patients who do not respond well to, or do not tolerate, available 6 prescription drugs,” and numerous “studies and surveys support the use of medical marijuana in certain 7 limited circumstances.”). However, the Supreme Court, exhibiting great deference to Congressional 8 judgment that marijuana appropriately is assigned to Schedule I of the CSA, rejected essentially the 9 same argument that Plaintiffs advance here – that marijuana can be deemed medically necessary despite 10 its inclusion on Schedule I – in Oakland Cannabis Buyers’ Cooperative. 532 U.S. at 493.

11 Existing law provides a clear non-judicial process by which Plaintiffs and others may seek to 12 establish the lawful use of marijuana for medicinal purposes: they may petition the DEA to reschedule 13 marijuana from Schedule I of the CSA. Indeed, there have been several attempts to reschedule 14 marijuana; all were unsuccessful, and each denial of a rescheduling petition by the DEA has been 15 upheld by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. See National Org.
16 for the Reform of Marijuana Laws v. Ingersoll, 497 F.2d 654 (D.C. Cir. 1974); National Org. for 17 the Reform of Marijuana Laws v. Drug Enforcement Admin., 559 F.2d 735 (D.C. Cir. 1977); 18 National Org. for the Reform of Marijuana Laws v. Drug Enforcement Admin. & Dep’t of 19 Health, Education & Welfare, No. 79-1660 (D.C. Cir. Oct. 16, 1980); Alliance for Cannabis

20 21
22 ⁸ The Court recognizes that the State of California, as well as the City and County, have 23 determined that marijuana has medicinal benefits and legally may be used for medicinal purposes. The 24 federal government, however, has concluded otherwise. Under the Supremacy Clause and the doctrine 25 of separation of powers, this Court may not substitute its judgment about the benefits of the medication 26 at issue for the judgment of the legislative and executive branches of the federal government. In the 27 present case, this Court would have to look behind the Congressional declarations and findings in the 28 CSA as well as the administrative determinations of the DEA, consider and weigh conflicting evidence presented by Plaintiffs and the government regarding the medicinal benefits of marijuana, and conclude that Congress’ determination as expressed in the CSA that marijuana has “no currently accepted medical use” is incorrect.

1 Therapeutics v. Drug Enforcement Admin., 930 F.2d 936 (D.C. Cir. 1991); Alliance for Cannabis
2 Therapeutics v. Drug Enforcement Admin., 15 F.3d 1131 (D.C. Cir. 1994).⁹

3 Plaintiffs submit compelling declarations that medicinal marijuana is the best means for certain 4 Patient-Plaintiffs to avoid debilitating pain and suffering. Defendants do not dispute this evidence, but 5 they note that the Patient-Plaintiffs only are deprived of the right to use a specific type of treatment and 6 are not deprived of the recognized right to treatment generally.¹⁰ While Plaintiffs claim that marijuana is 7 the only means for certain Patient-Plaintiffs to avoid extreme pain and suffering, the record does not 8 necessarily support that conclusion. The fact that the Patient-Plaintiffs have experienced relief from pain 9 as a result of their marijuana use does not mean that other, legal, means of pain relief are unavailable.¹¹

10 In Carnohan v. United States, 616 F.2d 1120 (9th Cir. 1980) (per curiam), the United States 11 Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit held that there is no constitutionally protected right to obtain 12 medication, whether unproven or not, free from the lawful exercise of the government’s powers. The 13 court affirmed the dismissal of a declaratory relief action in which the plaintiff, proceeding pro se, 14 sought to secure the right to obtain and use laetrile, a non-approved drug for the prevention of cancer, 15 without FDA approval. It held that “[c]onstitutional rights of privacy and personal liberty do not give 16 individuals the right to obtain laetrile free of the lawful exercise of government police power.” Id. at 17 1122. The court relied on the reasoning set forth in Rutherford v. United States, 616 F.2d 455 (10th 18 Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 937 (1980), in which the United States Court of Appeals for the 19 Tenth Circuit held that “the decision by the patient whether to have a treatment or not is a protected 20 right, but his selection of a particular treatment, or at least a medication, is within the area of

21 _____
22 ⁹ In 2002, the District of Columbia Circuit dismissed for lack of standing a petition for review of 23 a DEA order denying the plaintiffs’ petition to initiate rulemaking proceedings to reschedule marijuana.
24 See Gettman v. Drug Enforcement Admin., 290 F.3d 430 (D.C. Cir. 2002).

25 ¹⁰ For example, Plaintiffs are not precluded from obtaining and using Marinol (dronabinol), a 26 synthetic version of tetrahydrocannabinol (THC), which is one of the principal active compounds found 27 in marijuana.

28 ¹¹ The relative efficacy of various means of pain relief is a matter for the legislative and executive branches of government to decide.

1 governmental interest in protecting public health.” Id. at 457.¹²

2 Plaintiffs point out the court in Carnohan expressly did “not decide whether Carnohan has a 3 constitutionally protected right to treat himself with home remedies of his own confection,” id. at 1122, 4 and that in fact the marijuana that Plaintiffs seek to use for medicinal purposes is of their “own 5 confection.” Defendants, however, observe that every other court in this circuit to consider a similar 6 argument concerning marijuana has held that there is no fundamental right to cultivate or possess
7 marijuana for medicinal use. See, e.g., Raich v. Ashcroft, 248 F.Supp.2d 918, 928 (N.D. Cal. 2003)
8 (“While Plaintiffs may vehemently disagree with the wisdom of the federal government’s determination 9 that marijuana has no medical efficacy . . . they do not have a fundamental, constitutional right to obtain 10 and use it for treatment.”). Because it concludes that the fundamental right articulated by Plaintiffs – the 11 right of terminally ill persons to use physician-recommended medication to alleviate their pain and 12 suffering and to control the circumstances of their own deaths – is not “deeply rooted in this Nation’s 13 history and tradition” and that recognition of such a constitutionally-protected right under the 14 circumstances of this case would be inconsistent with the holding of Carnohan, this Court concludes 15 that Plaintiffs cannot demonstrate a likelihood of success on this aspect of their claim.

16
17 b. Fundamental Right to Follow the Recommendations of One’s Physician

18 Plaintiffs next claim that Defendants’ actions violate the Patient-Plaintiffs’ fundamental right to 19 follow the recommendations of their respective physicians in treating their illnesses. The Patient-20 Plaintiffs have submitted evidence that physicians have recommended that they use marijuana for 21 medicinal purposes, and they contend that Defendants’ actions will erode their physician-patient 22 relationships.

23 Plaintiffs rely on Conant, in which the Ninth Circuit substantially upheld a district court’s order 24 that enjoined the federal government from revoking a physician’s license to prescribe controlled

25 _____
26 ¹² The Carnohan court also cited with approval People v. Privitera, 23 Cal.3d 697 (1979), 27 cert. denied, Privitera v. California, 444 U.S. 949 (1979), in which the California Supreme Court 28 refused to recognize a fundamental right to use laetrile.

1 substances or conducting an investigation of a physician where the basis for the government’s action 2 was the physician’s professional recommendation of the use of marijuana for medicinal purposes. 309
3 F.3d at 639. The permanent injunction at issue in Conant was entered to protect the First Amendment 4 right of the plaintiff doctors, id. at 632; it did not establish any right to use or obtain marijuana for 5 medicinal purposes. Plaintiffs emphasize that the Ninth Circuit recognized the importance of the 6 physician-patient relationship: “An integral component of the practice of medicine is the communication 7 between a doctor and a patient. Physicians must be able to speak frankly and openly to patients.” Id.
8 at 636. However, notwithstanding Judge Kozinski’s thoughtful concurring opinion, Conant’s relevance 9 to the present case is unclear. Plaintiffs have not alleged any violation of First Amendment rights, and 10 Conant does not go so far as to support Plaintiffs’ position that the Patient-Plaintiffs have the right to 11 follow their physicians’ recommendations to use medicinal marijuana.¹³

12 The Court is unaware of any authority that recognizes a fundamental right of patients to follow 13 the recommendations of their physicians in treating their illnesses or to obtain and use physician-14 recommended medications in situations where the use of such medications is prohibited by law.
15 Indeed, “if one does not have a right to obtain medication free from government regulation, there is no 16 reason why one would have that right upon a physician’s recommendation.” United States v.
17 Cannabis Cultivator’s Club, No. C-98-00085 CRB, etc., 1999 WL 111893, *2 (N.D. Cal. Feb.
18 25, 1999). Plaintiffs cannot demonstrate a likelihood of success on this claim under existing law.

20 c. Unlawful Exercise of Congressional Power Under the Commerce Clause

21 The announced purpose of the September 5, 2002 raid was to enforce federal law as set forth 22 in the Controlled Substances Act. As discussed above, the CSA prohibits the manufacture, 23 distribution, dispensation, possession with intent to distribute, and simple possession of marijuana. See 24 21 U.S.C. § 841(a). The CSA was enacted pursuant to the authority of Congress under the 25 Commerce Clause, U.S. CONST. art. I, § 8, cl. 3, pursuant to which Congress may regulate those

26
27 ¹³ The government has filed a petition for writ of certiorari asking the Supreme Court to reverse 28 the holding in Conant.

1 activities that “substantially affect” interstate commerce. United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 559 2 (1995).

3 Plaintiffs argue that application of the CSA to wholly intrastate, non-economic activities that are 4 authorized expressly by state and local governments constitutes an unlawful exercise of Congressional 5 powers under the Commerce Clause.¹⁴ The Supreme Court expressly reserved this issue in United 6 States v. Oakland Cannabis Buyers’ Cooperative, 532 U.S. 483, 495 n.7 (2001) (“Nor are we 7 passing today on a constitutional question, such as whether the Controlled Substances Act exceeds 8 Congress’ power under the Commerce Clause.”). Plaintiffs contend that the Supreme Court’s 9 decisions in United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549 (1995), and United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S.
10 598 (2000), support their position.

11 In Lopez, the Supreme Court struck down the Gun-Free School Zones Act of 1990, 18 12 U.S.C. § 922(q), which prohibited possession of a firearm within 1,000 feet of a school, as an 13 unconstitutional exercise of Congressional power under the Commerce Clause. The Court found that § 14 922(q) had nothing to do with commerce or any sort of economic enterprise, that it failed to require 15 that the firearm possession in question actually affect interstate commerce, and that it did not contain 16 any formal findings regarding the effect on interstate commerce of the firearm possession in question.
17 514 U.S. at 561-63. The Court warned that Congressional power under the Commerce Clause power 18 “is subject to outer limits.” Id. at 557. At the same time, it reaffirmed that ““where a general regulatory 19 statute bears a substantial relation to commerce, the de minimis character of individual instances arising 20 under that statute is of no consequence.”” Id. at 558 (quoting Maryland v. Wirtz, 392 U.S. 183, 197 21 n.27 (1968)). Five years later, the Court held in Morrison that in creating a civil remedy for victims of 22 gender-motivated violence under the Violence Against Women Act, 42 U.S.C. § 13981, Congress 23 again impermissibly had exceeded its authority under the Commerce Clause. That decision was based 24

25 ¹⁴ Plaintiffs have submitted evidence that WAMM members cultivate and use marijuana only for 26 medicinal purposes, that they do so only within California, that they use and transport marijuana for 27 medicinal purposes only within California, and that they neither purchase nor sell marijuana. See Corral 28 Decl. ¶¶ 11, 13, 20.

1 on the Court's conclusion that, despite Congressional findings regarding the economic effect of gender-2 motivated crimes of violence (which the Court deemed inadequate), intrastate violence against women 3 is not economic activity and does not "substantially affect" interstate commerce. 529 U.S. at 613-615.

4 This Court considered and rejected a similar Commerce Clause argument made by the movants
5 in the related case. See Wo/Men's Alliance for Med. Marijuana v. United States, No. 02-MC-6 7012 JF, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26389 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 3, 2002). In Wo/Men's Alliance for 7 Medical Marijuana, the Court concluded that Ninth Circuit precedent precluded the movants from 8 prevailing on their Commerce Clause challenge. In particular, the Court determined that it was bound 9 by United States v. Visman, 919 F.2d 1390 (9th Cir. 1990), cert. denied, Visman v. United States, 10 502 U.S. 969 (1991), which addressed cultivation of marijuana explicitly. Id. at *9. See also United 11 States v. Rodriguez-Camacho, 468 F.2d 1220, 1221-22 (9th Cir. 1972), cert. denied, Rodriguez- 12 Camacho v. United States, 410 U.S. 985 (1973). In Visman, the Ninth Circuit upheld the 13 defendant's conviction for cultivation and possession of marijuana against a Commerce Clause 14 challenge.

15 [Visman] holds unambiguously that "Congress may constitutionally regulate intrastate 16 criminal cultivation of marijuana plants found rooted in the soil . . ." and that "local 17 criminal cultivation of marijuana is within a class of activities that adversely affects 18 interstate commerce." 919 F.3d at 1393. While it was decided before United States 19 v. Lopez (citation omitted) and United States v. Morrison (citation omitted), in which the Supreme Court sustained challenges to federal statutes passed pursuant to the Commerce Clause, Visman is still the law in the Ninth Circuit, and it was cited with express approval in United States v. Kim, 94 F.3d 1247, 1250 (9th Cir. 1996), which was decided after Lopez.

20 Wo/Men's Alliance for Med. Marijuana, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26389 at *9-10. The Ninth Circuit 21 has affirmed the constitutionality of the CSA under the Commerce Clause in two other post-Lopez 22 decisions. See United States v. Bramble, 103 F.3d 1475, 1479 (9th Cir. 1996); United States v.
23 Tisor, 96 F.3d 370, 375 (9th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, Tisor v. United States, 519 U.S. 1140 24 (1997). Defendants note that eleven other courts of appeal also have upheld the constitutionality of 25 various provisions of the CSA against Commerce Clause challenges.

26 In March 2003, Judge Martin Jenkins of this district also considered and rejected the argument 27 that federal prohibition of medicinal marijuana under the CSA is an impermissible expansion of 1 Congress' power under the Commerce Clause. See Raich v. Ashcroft, 248 F.Supp.2d 918 (N.D.

2 Cal. 2003). Judge Jenkins held that “the decision in Morrison is insufficiently on point to permit this 3 Court to overrule the Visman, Rodriguez-Camacho, and Tisor line of cases.” Id. at 925-26. He 4 concluded that:

5 In the final analysis, neither Lopez nor Morrison answer definitively the question posed 6 to this Court: whether the Controlled Substances Act, as applied in this case, is beyond 7 the purview of Congress' power to regulate activity under the Commerce Clause.
Therefore, the Court is still bound by existing Ninth Circuit authority on this issue.

8 Id. at 926.

9 Shortly after the decision in Raich, the Ninth Circuit decided United States v. McCoy, 323
10 F.3d 1114 (9th Cir. 2003).¹⁵ In McCoy, the defendant had entered a conditional guilty plea to a 11 violation of 18 U.S.C. § 2252(a)(4)(B), which prohibits possession of child pornography produced 12 using materials that have traveled in interstate commerce. The visual depiction at issue was a single 13 photograph of the defendant and her minor daughter posing partially unclothed with their genital areas 14 exposed. On appeal, the Ninth Circuit held the statute unconstitutional under the Commerce Clause as 15 applied to simple intrastate possession of a photograph that had not traveled in interstate commerce and 16 was not intended for interstate distribution or any economic use. Id. at 1115.

17 Plaintiffs contend that the McCoy decision supports their position and mandates that this Court 18 apply Morrison's four-part test for determining whether their activities “substantially affect” interstate 19 commerce. The elements of the Morrison test are:

20 1) whether the statute in question regulates commerce “or any sort of economic 21 enterprise”; 2) whether the statute contains any “express jurisdictional element which 22 might limit its reach to a discrete set” of cases; 3) whether the statute or its legislative history contains “express congressional findings” that the regulated activity affects interstate commerce; and 4) whether the link between the regulated activity and a substantial affect on interstate commerce is “attenuated.”

23 Id. at 1119 (citing Morrison, 529 U.S. at 610-612).

24 Applying the Morrison test, the McCoy court concluded that § 2252(a)(4)(B) “does not 25 regulate activity that is economic or commercial in nature”; that the statute's jurisdictional element “does 26

27 ¹⁵ The Ninth Circuit has denied the government's petition for rehearing and suggestion for 28 rehearing en banc regarding the McCoy decision.

1 not serve to limit application of the statute to a discrete set of cases that have a substantial effect on 2 interstate commerce”; that the statute’s findings and the legislative history do not support the 3 government’s position; and that “[t]he relationship between purely intrastate non-commercial 4 possession of prohibited home-grown depictions and the highly commercial interstate activity engaged 5 in by the ‘multi-million dollar industries’ involved is highly attenuated at best.” Id. at 1129-30. Plaintiffs 6 argue that the CSA’s prohibition on manufacture and distribution of marijuana similarly is 7 unconstitutional as applied to their wholly intrastate, non-economic activities, a discrete class of 8 activities that are authorized expressly by state and local governments.¹⁶ They note that the Ninth 9 Circuit did not apply the four-part Morrison test in Visman or the other decisions relied upon by 10 Defendants. Plaintiffs contend that McCoy and Morrison require that Defendants demonstrate that the 11 particular activity at issue here “substantially affects interstate commerce.”

12 However, the McCoy panel expressly distinguished § 2252(a)(4)(B) from the CSA:

13 [The CSA] contains express legislative findings regarding the relationship between 14 purely intrastate activities and interstate commerce. [] It is primarily on the basis of 15 these congressional findings that we rejected Commerce Clause challenges to the Act.
16 We express no view, however, as to the effect of Morrison on these cases.

17 Id. at 1128 n.24. The court also concluded that the photograph depicting child pornography at issue 18 was not a fungible item. Id. at 1122. In contrast, Congress expressly has declared that controlled 19 substances, including marijuana, are fungible items for purposes of interstate commerce. Congress has 20 concluded that because “[c]ontrolled substances manufactured and distributed intrastate cannot be 21 differentiated from controlled substances manufactured and distributed interstate,” it is “not feasible” to 22 distinguish between them. 21 U.S.C. § 801(5). Similarly, in United States v. Cannabis Cultivators
23 Club, 5 F.Supp.2d 1086 (N.D. Cal. 1998), the district court found that “there is nothing in the nature 24 of medical marijuana that limits it to intrastate cultivation.” Id. at 1098.

25 Applying the Morrison test to the present case, the Court concludes that Congress has not 26 exceeded its power under the Commerce Clause. With respect to the first factor – whether the statute 27 regulates commerce or any economic activity – the analysis depends upon how the class of activity

28 ¹⁶ Plaintiffs also request that the Court consider their specific, actual use of marijuana.

1 under scrutiny is defined. Plaintiffs contend that the relevant class of activity is intrastate cultivation of 2 marijuana for medicinal purposes pursuant to the recommendation or approval of a physician in 3 compliance with California’s medicinal marijuana statute. This definition is problematic, however, 4 because its application depends upon whether a state has enacted legislation inconsistent with the CSA.
5 Put another way, if Plaintiffs’ Commerce Clause claim were upheld on the basis of this definition, the 6 CSA would be unconstitutional as applied to Plaintiffs and similarly situated individuals in Alaska, 7 Arizona, California, Colorado, Hawaii, Nevada, Oregon, Washington, and other states that have 8 enacted legislation approving the use of medicinal marijuana, but presumably would be constitutional as 9 applied to similarly situated individuals who happen to reside in a state where intrastate possession or 10 cultivation of marijuana for medicinal purposes is unlawful. The proper class of activity here thus must 11 be limited to intrastate cultivation or possession of marijuana for medicinal purposes, regardless of 12 whether a state or local government has legalized such cultivation or possession.

13 Even this definition is problematic, however, because law enforcement officials may not be able 14 to determine the purpose for which a given marijuana plant is being grown. Nonetheless, using this 15 definition of the relevant class of activity, the declarations and findings of Congress in adopting the CSA 16 make clear that Congress considers such activity to have a substantial effect on interstate commerce 17 because controlled substances are fungible items that influence and contribute to a national black 18 market for controlled substances regardless of the purposes for which they are used.¹⁷ See 21 U.S.C.
19 § 801(3)-(6). Unlike the statute at issue in Lopez, the CSA “is an essential part of a larger regulation of 20 economic activity, in which the regulatory scheme could be undercut unless the intrastate activity were 21 regulated.” Lopez, 514 U.S. at 561. The first factor of the four-part Morrison test thus favors 22 Defendants.

23 The second factor – whether the statute contains any express jurisdictional element – clearly 24

25 ¹⁷ The “cumulative effect” principle established by the Supreme Court in Wickard v. Filburn, 26 317 U.S. 111 (1942), permits Congress to regulate an entire class of acts under the Commerce Clause 27 if the class has a substantial economic effect on interstate commerce without regard to whether a 28 particular act would not have such an effect.

1 favors Plaintiffs because the CSA contains no such provision. The third factor – the presence of 2 Congressional findings – favors Defendants. While the presence of formal declarations and findings in 3 the CSA is not determinative, and while those findings are general and do not address precisely the 4 narrowly defined conduct in which Plaintiffs engage, this Court cannot conclude that the findings are 5 inadequate as a matter of law when the Ninth Circuit repeatedly has confirmed their rationality and has 6 approved or deferred to them. The fourth factor – whether the link between the regulated activity and 7 a substantial affect on interstate commerce is attenuated – arguably favors Plaintiffs. The Ninth Circuit 8 has stated in dicta that “[m]edical marijuana, when grown locally for personal consumption, does not 9 have any direct or obvious effect on interstate commerce.” Conant, 309 F.3d at 647.

10 Because the first factor, which is “ordinarily the most important” one, McCoy, 323 F.3d at 11 1129, and the third factor, which this Court finds to be equally important, favor Defendants, the Court
12 concludes that application of the Morrison test results in a legal conclusion that the targeted activity
13 “substantially affects” interstate commerce. Put differently, McCoy does not change this Court’s earlier 14 conclusion in Wo/Men’s Alliance for Medical Marijuana that the Court is bound by existing Ninth 15 Circuit authority on this issue. See also Raich, 248 F.Supp.2d at 926. Accordingly, Plaintiffs cannot 16 demonstrate a likelihood of success on their claim that application of the CSA to their conduct 17 constitutes an unlawful exercise of Congressional powers under the Commerce Clause.

18 19 d. Violation of Tenth Amendment

20 Plaintiffs’ final claim is that Defendants’ actions infringe upon the general police powers of the 21 state and its subdivisions under the Tenth Amendment to provide for the health and safety of their 22 citizens. It is well-established that “[each state] retains broad regulatory authority to protect the health 23 and safety of its citizens.” Maine v. Taylor, 477 U.S. 131, 151 (1986). Plaintiffs contend that the 24 Compassionate Use Act of 1996 and the medicinal marijuana ordinances enacted by the City and 25 County fall squarely within the police powers reserved to the states and their subdivisions and that 26
27
28

1 Defendants' interference with the statute thus violates the Tenth Amendment.¹⁸

2 Plaintiffs make two arguments in support of their Tenth Amendment claim. First, they contend 3 that because the September 5, 2002 raid and seizure and other federal enforcement of the CSA was 4 undertaken pursuant to an unlawful exercise of Congressional powers under the Commerce Clause, 5 Defendants' actions necessarily violate the Tenth Amendment. As discussed above, the Court 6 concludes that under existing Ninth Circuit authority Plaintiffs cannot prevail on their claim that 7 application of the CSA to their activities constitutes an unlawful exercise of Congressional powers
8 under the Commerce Clause. "The Supreme Court has held that a valid exercise of Commerce Clause
9 authority that displaces States' exercise of their police powers or curtails the States' ability to legislate 10 on matters they may consider important does not constitute an invasion of sovereign areas reserved to 11 the States by the Tenth Amendment." Raich, 248 F.Supp.2d at 927 (citing Hodel v. Virginia Surface 12 Mining and Reclamation Ass'n, Inc., 452 U.S. 264, 291 (1981)). See also New York v. United 13 States, 505 U.S. 144 (1992) ("if a power is delegated to Congress in the Constitution, the Tenth 14 Amendment expressly disclaims any reservation of that power to the States"). The Ninth Circuit held in 15 Kim that the defendants' "argument that § 841(a)(1) intrudes into an area traditionally regulated by 16 states lacks merit." 94 F.3d at 1250 n.4. This aspect of Plaintiffs' Tenth Amendment claim rises and 17 falls with their Commerce Clause challenge.

18 Second, Plaintiffs claim that Defendants impermissibly have commandeered the state legislative 19 process and conscripted state officers to carry out the September 5, 2002 raid. "[T]he [f]ederal 20 [g]overnment may not compel the States to implement, by legislation or executive action, federal 21 regulatory programs." Printz v. United States, 521 U.S. 898, 925 (1997) (invalidating provision of 22 the Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act). Nor may Congress "circumvent that prohibition by 23 conscripting the State's officers directly." Id. at 935. However, this is not a case in which the federal 24 government has "commandeered" the state legislative process by requiring the state legislature to enact 25 a particular kind of law, because it is not forcing the state to take any action. Although they assert that

26 27 ¹⁸ See note 2, supra.

1 Defendants conscripted state officers because the DEA task force that carried out the September 5, 2 2002 raid included officers from the San Jose Police Department and the Santa Clara County Sheriff's 3 Department, Plaintiffs have not established that state officers were required or compelled to participate 4 in the raid. Indeed, San Jose's Chief of Police withdrew his officers from the DEA task force after the 5 September 5, 2002, raid. See Declaration of Gerald Uelman ("Uelman Decl.") ¶ 15. Plaintiffs do not 6 allege that the San Jose Police Department or its chief were punished by the federal government for this 7 action¹⁹, and Defendants assert that the state voluntarily chose to participate in the DEA task force.

8 Because Plaintiffs cannot prevail on their Commerce Clause challenge and have not established 9 that Defendants commandeered the state legislative process or conscripted state officers, the Court 10 concludes that they cannot demonstrate a likelihood of success on their Tenth Amendment claim.

11

12 B. Motion to Dismiss

13 Defendants move to dismiss Claims 1 and 2 of Plaintiffs' complaint (for injunctive and 14 declaratory relief for deprivation of fundamental rights under the Fifth and Ninth Amendments) because 15 Plaintiffs cannot succeed on their fundamental rights argument. They move to dismiss Claims 3 and 4 16 (for injunctive and declaratory relief based upon unlawful exercise of Congressional powers under the 17 Commerce Clause and violation of the Tenth Amendment) because Plaintiffs cannot succeed on their 18 Commerce Clause or Tenth Amendment challenges. For the reasons discussed above, the Court 19 concludes that Plaintiffs cannot succeed on these claims as currently pled under existing Ninth Circuit 20 authority.²⁰ Accordingly, the motion is well-taken as to Claims 1-4 of Plaintiffs' complaint.²¹

22 ¹⁹ As a result of its withdrawal from the DEA task force, the San Jose Police Department 23 apparently became ineligible for funding and other resources that it would have received had it 24 continued to participate. See Uelman Decl. ¶ 15. However, there is no evidence that the department 25 was in any way required to participate in the task force or that it suffered any detriment beyond the loss 26 of an opportunity to be compensated and to receive certain tactical support and information from the DEA for its participation.

27 ²⁰ Defendants also argue that WAMM and Valerie Corral are barred from asserting Claims 1-4 28 because they unsuccessfully litigated a Commerce Clause claim in Wo/Men's Alliance for Medical

1 Defendants also move to dismiss Claim 5, which seeks declaratory relief pursuant to the 2 Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 U.S.C. § 2201, that Plaintiffs' actions are protected from civil or 3 criminal liability under the CSA by 21 U.S.C. § 885(d). Plaintiffs contend that WAMM and Valerie 4 Corral are immune from liability by virtue of the Santa Cruz City Council having adopted a resolution in 5 December 2002 deputizing WAMM and the Corrals to function as City-authorized medicinal marijuana 6 providers pursuant to the City's medicinal marijuana ordinance.

7 Because Plaintiffs name individual government employees acting in their official capacities as 8 defendants, the instant action is one against the United States. Lehman v. Jacobosky, No. C-97-1968
9 FMS, 1997 WL 573426, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 9, 1997); Atkinson v. O'Neill, 867 F.2d 589, 590
10 (10th Cir. 1989). However, the United States and its employees, sued in their official capacities, are 11 immune from suit unless sovereign immunity has been waived. Kentucky v. Graham, 473 U.S. 159, 12 165-67 (1985). The Declaratory Judgment Act confers jurisdiction to hear the subject matter of a 13 claim but it does not constitute a waiver of the sovereign immunity of the United States. Benvenuti v.
14 Dep't of Defense, 587 F.Supp. 348, 352 (D. D.C. 1984). Plaintiffs have not demonstrated a waiver 15 of sovereign immunity by Defendants.

16 Even if Defendants had waived sovereign immunity, Plaintiffs' claim that their actions are 17 protected from civil or criminal liability under 21 U.S.C. § 885(d), a statute intended to provide 18 immunity for acts committed by law enforcement officers in the course of legitimate drug enforcement 19 operations, is fatally defective. Judge Charles Breyer of this district rejected the same argument in 20

21 Marijuana v. United States, No. 02-MC-7012 JF, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26389 (N.D. Cal. Dec.
22 3, 2002). In light of its disposition of Plaintiffs' motion for preliminary injunction, the Court need not 23 address this argument.

24 ²¹ Plaintiffs request that the Court take judicial notice of certain documents in support of their 25 opposition to Defendants' motion to dismiss. The documents at issue appear in scholarly texts, an 26 official report of the Ohio State Medical Committee on Cannabis Indica, and a California State Senate 27 Rules Committee bill analysis. The Court concludes that these documents are appropriate for judicial 28 notice and therefore overrules Defendants' objection to Plaintiffs' request. Defendants do not object to Plaintiffs' request that the Court take judicial notice of certain documents in support of their motion for preliminary injunction.

1 United States v. Cannabis Cultivator’s Club, et al., No. C-98-00085 CRB, etc., slip op. at 2-5 2 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 3, 1998), Ex. 2 to Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss, finding that any other result “would 3 mean that a state or municipality could exempt itself from the Controlled Substances Act.” Id. at 4.
4 The Court finds the reasoning set forth by Judge Breyer applicable to the present case because the 5 City’s medicinal marijuana ordinance is in positive conflict with the CSA. Accordingly, Claim 5 will be 6 dismissed. Defendants’ motion will be granted with leave to amend as to all claims asserted against 7 them.

8 9 IV. CONCLUSION

10 This Court is acutely mindful of the suffering of the Patient-Plaintiffs and of the evidence that 11 medicinal marijuana has helped to alleviate that suffering. As it commented at oral argument, the Court 12 finds the declarations of the Patient-Plaintiffs deeply moving. The voters of California and the governing 13 bodies of the City and County of Santa Cruz have made a clear legislative judgment that seriously ill 14 patients should be permitted to use marijuana for medicinal purposes in compliance with the 15 Compassionate Use Act of 1996. However, the legislative and executive branches of the federal 16 government have a different view, and in a federal system that view is controlling unless the federal 17 government is acting in excess of its constitutional powers. Although Plaintiffs have made a significant 18 showing of irreparable injury, the Court, as was the case in Wo/Men’s Alliance for Medical 19 Marijuana, has no alternative but to conclude that under existing law they cannot succeed on the merits 20 of their claims. One reasonably may challenge through the legislative, administrative, and political 21 processes the judgment of Congress and the DEA that marijuana has no medicinal value. However, it 22 is not the role of federal courts, and in particular federal district courts, to impose their own policy 23 judgments even in the most sympathetic of circumstances, especially where the legislative and executive 24 branches of the federal government repeatedly have reaffirmed the policy at issue.

25 Good cause therefore appearing, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that Plaintiffs’ motion for 26 preliminary injunction is DENIED. Because the Court concludes that Plaintiffs cannot succeed on the 27 merits of their claims as presently pled, Defendants’ motion to dismiss Plaintiffs’ complaint is

1 GRANTED with leave to amend. Any amended complaint shall be filed within ninety (90) days of the 2 date of this order.²²

3
4
5 DATED: August 28, 2003

(electronic signature authorized)

6 7 JEREMY FOGEL
United States District Judge

8
9 10 11 12 13 14
15
16 17
18 19 20 21
22
23
24
25 _____
26 ²² The Court notes that oral argument before the Ninth Circuit on the appeal from the decision 27 in Wo/Men's Alliance for Medical Marijuana is scheduled for mid-September 2003. Pending 28 disposition of that appeal, Plaintiffs may wish to amend their complaint. If Plaintiffs elect not to amend their complaint and seek entry of judgment, they should notify the Court accordingly.

1 Copies of this Order have been served upon the following persons:

2 John G. Barisone
3 cferris@abc-law.com

4 Frank Kennamer
5 frank.kennamer@bingham.com

6 Neha Shah Nissen
7 nnissen@mdbe.com

8 Mark Thomas Quinlivan
9 mark.quinlivan@usdoj.gov

10 Lauri A. Schumacher
11 lauri.schumacher@bingham.com

12 Counsel for Plaintiffs are responsible for distributing copies of this Order to counsel of record who have 13 not registered for electronic filing under the Court's Electronic Case File (ECF) program.

14

15

16

17

18

19 20

21

22

23

24

25

26

27

28